Wax impression of a gold solidus of Julian II (AD 360-363), VIRTVS EXERC GALL, mint of Lyons, RIC 226 Notes from Roger Bland's forthcoming book on Roman gold coins from the 4th century, "Roman gold coins found in Britain", published by the Royal Numismatic Society: "7.6 St Agnes (Beacon), SW7050 Julian II, AD 355-363

It is not described further and its current location is unknown.'): VCH Cornwall I, 1906, pp. 12, 34 and 39; S M Pearce, Trans. Devonshire Association, 102, 1970, p. 26; Penhallurick pp. 1-2 ('in about April 1910 a gold coin 'in almost perfect condition was turned up while harrowing' at Carn Gowla, immediately south of St Agnes Head. The lucky finder was W Tonkin. A letter dated 8 June 1910 from the Revd Alfred Rundall of St Agnes identified the coin as of Julian II...') St Agnes Museum has an impression of this coin which came to it amongst a large amount of material given to the Museum by the family of Dr Whitworth, one of five generations of doctors in general practice in St Agnes. On a piece of paper preserved with the impression is the following account: 'On [...] 1910 Mrs John Tonkin of Carn Golla, north-west of the Beacon, picked up in a field recently enclosed from the Common, which had just been scuffed or harrowed, a Roman gold coin the size of a half-sovereign, bright and in perfect preservation ... [Description follows.]'

We are very grateful to Clare Murton of St Agnes Museum for drawing this impression to our attention. Isaac 14, 12. Method and date of discovery: Chance find, 1910 Note: RIC 226 is listed on the authority of a single specimen sold by Münzhandlung Basel, Auction 6, 18 March 1936, lot 226, but on examination this coin, as Bastien points out, is clearly an ancient forgery. Bastien (op. cit.) 267, cited on the authority of a single specimen in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, lacks the star in the field on the reverse and is therefore a different variety. This coin therefore provides the first confirmation that the type described under RIC 226 does, in fact, exist." Wells) which will be published this year by the Royal Numismatic Society. Roger Penhallurick was the late Senior Curator of the Royal Institution of Cornwall at the Royal Cornwall Museum: "Tonkin was prophetic in assuming more gold coins might be found. New Downs is the area immediately inland from St Agnes Head and Newdowns Head, and in about April 1910 a gold coin "in almost perfect condition was turned up when harrowing" at Carn Gowla (SW 699 512). The lucky finder was W. Tonkin.

A letter dated 8 June 1910 from the Revd Alfred Rundall of St Agnes identified the coin as of Julian

II, sometimes referred to as "the Apostate" because of his preference for the old pagan religion rather than Christianity which he was forced to adopt. W. Tonkin was probably the son of Mrs Mary Tonkin of Carngullow, at whose home the coin was available for inspection "any day". Needless to say, the coin no longer survives, but Rundall's reading is sufficient to identify the solidus. JULIAN II (360-363) Obv. CL IVLIA-NVS P P AVG. Bd. h. r. Rev. VIRTVS EX-ERC GALL. Helmeted soldier std r., h. l. hld a trophy over his l. shoulder, and placing his r. h. on h. of captive kneeling on one knee to r. Ex. LVQ, a misreading for LVG, mint of Lyons."
