

DEBITAGE

Unique ID: NLM-6BE288

Object type certainty: Certain

Workflow status: Awaiting validation

Pale grey flint debitage. A sub-triangular flake with broad and narrow parallel flakes removed from its dorsal side and with a bulb at the narrower end of the ventral surface. Light misty patina suggests the object has endured a period of exposure to a calcareous environment. The finder kindly suggests an identification as a chisel or tranchet arrowhead, though the curved profile would appear likely to lead an arrow astray. Suggested date: Neolithic, 4000-2350 BC

Length: 28.0mm, Width: 21.8mm, Thickness: 4.7mm, Weight: 2.88gms
