Minister's foreword

It is my pleasure to introduce the Treasure Act Annual Report 2010.

The Treasure Act 1996 continues to be a great success, ensuring that the most significant archaeological discoveries are housed in public museums for the benefit of all. 2010 was a record year, with the number of potential Treasure finds reported increasing to 860 in England and Wales, a 10.5% increase since the previous year. Of these items, 299 have been (or are to be) acquired by museums.

It is especially satisfying that the number of interested parties waiving their right to a reward for Treasure finds remains high, with 86 individuals waiving their share in 70 cases. These donations have allowed 37 museums to acquire finds that may otherwise have not been available for the public to study and enjoy. Similarly, many museum acquisitions have been made possible only through the kind assistance of funding bodies, particularly the Art Fund, Headley Trust, Heritage Lottery Fund, National Heritage Memorial Fund and the V&A Purchase Grant Fund. I am extremely grateful to these organisations for their recognition of the importance of archaeological finds and their support of museums' efforts to acquire them. I am also impressed with local fundraising campaigns, and it is heartening to see so many individuals and organisations in local communities supporting the acquisition of Treasure items and investing in their heritage.

There are many others to whom I am indebted for the continued success of the Treasure Act, in particular the Portable Antiquities Scheme and its local network of Finds Liaison Officers (FLOs), to whom most finds of Treasure are reported. The FLOs' role is vital in informing finders of treasure and landowners of archaeological best practice and their responsibilities under the law and they are also indispensable in facilitating the administration of Treasure cases. Together with curators, scientists and conservators at the British Museum and National Museum Wales, they also provide expert reports on Treasure finds for Coroners. I would also like to thank Coroners and their staff for their diligence in holding Treasure inquests. The Department of Portable Antiquities and Treasure at the British Museum supports Coroners in England and serves as the secretariat for the Treasure Valuation Committee and I am grateful for their continued excellent work.

I would also like to acknowledge the valuable contribution of the Treasure Valuation Committee, which provided valuation recommendations for over 270 treasure cases from 2010. This summer marks the first year of Professor Lord Renfrew of Kaimsthorn's Chairmanship of the Committee, and he has brought a wealth of archaeological knowledge and experience to the post. I am thankful for the services of all of the Committee members, who voluntarily provide their time and expertise.

Introduction

Under the Treasure Act 1996, finders have a legal obligation to report all finds of potential Treasure. For a summary see finds.org.uk/treasure or the leaflet Advice for Finders of Archaeological Objects, Including Treasure.

The Act allows a national or local museum to acquire Treasure finds for public benefit. If this happens, a reward is paid, which is (normally) shared equally between the finder and landowner, though the interested parties may wish to waive their rights to a reward, enabling museums to acquire such finds at no or reduced cost. Rewards are fixed at the full market value of the find, determined by the Secretary of State on the advice of an independent panel of experts known as the Treasure Valuation Committee.

Although Treasure finds account for a relatively small proportion of archaeological finds found in England and Wales by the public, any archaeological find may be recorded with the Portable Antiquities Scheme: this data is published online at finds.org.uk. The Scheme and its network of local archaeologists – experts in recording small finds, known as Finds Liaison Officers – play an increasingly important role in the operation of the Treasure Act, advising finders of their legal obligations, providing advice on the process and writing reports on potential Treasure finds for local coroners.

Organisation

The administration of the Treasure process is undertaken by the Department of Portable Antiquities and Treasure at the British Museum, which employs a Treasure Registrar and four Assistant Treasure Registrars, one of whom is part-time. This work involves the preparation of Treasure cases for inquest (at a Coroner's Court), the handling of disclaimed cases, the secretariat of the Treasure Valuation Committee, and the payment of rewards to finders/landowners.

Number of Treasure cases and geographic distribution

The number of Treasure cases reported in 2010 was 860 (Table A), an increase of 10.5% on 2009; this is a 328% increase on the first full year of the Act (1998).

Table A: Number of Treasure cases reported 1988–2011 (England, Wales & Northern Ireland)

The high level of the reporting of Treasure reflects a wider understanding on the part of finders of their obligations under the Treasure Act, through the education and outreach work of the Portable Antiquities Scheme and its Finds Liaison Officers.

Table B illustrates the geographic distribution of Treasure finds. This shows that in 2010 reporting of Treasure in England was heaviest along the eastern half of the country, with North Yorkshire and Lincolnshire each having 67 cases reported, followed by Norfolk (65), Suffolk (59), Essex (57) and Kent (52). The only other county with more than 30 cases was Wiltshire (36), but the Isle of Wight (30) continued to report a high number of finds for a relatively small area. Several areas (mostly metropolitan ones and those in the western part of England) had only a handful (or no) cases reported. This broadly reflects the pattern of cases reported since 1997.

The number of Treasure cases reported from Wales (25) was up 25% on the previous year, but remains significantly less than the number reported from England (835). Northern Ireland had no finds of Treasure reported in 2010. Wales has a single full-time Portable Antiquities Scheme post (though finds-recording work is also undertaken by the Welsh Archaeological Trusts) and Northern Ireland is not covered by the Scheme.

Analysis of Treasure finds

Table C provides the dispositional outcome of Treasure cases according to period and type. This shows that of the cases reported in 2010, 34.76% (299) have been (or are in the process of being) acquired by a museum, of which 70 were donated. 49.18% (423) of all finds were disclaimed and returned to the finder/landowner, 12.33% (106) were deemed not to be Treasure, and 3.72% (32) are still to be determined. Interestingly, while the total number of cases from England and Wales rose from 778 in 2009 to 860 in 2010, these dispositional percentages are remarkably consistent with those from 2009.

¹ This covers finds that have been acquired as well as finds where museums have made an expression of interest, but have not yet acquired.
² Includes objects 'of age' but not attributable to a particular historic period.

The number of Treasure finds acquired by chronological period varies and differs between the categories of objects and coins. Of the objects reported as Treasure in 2010, museums acquired 75% (3) of those that were Iron Age, 60.49% (49) Early Medieval, 58.06% (18) Bronze Age, 32.20% (66) Medieval, 41.67% (30) Roman, and 24.64% (69) Post-Medieval. Of the coins reported, museums acquired 88.88% (8) of those that were Early Medieval, 53.57% (30) Roman, 85.18% (23) Medieval, 42.86% (9) Post-Medieval and 40% (4) that were Iron Age. In general terms, therefore, museums are more likely to acquire objects and coins that are more ancient – the low percentage of Iron Age coin cases acquired may have low statistical relevance, but it might also reflect the fact that most of the coins from this period found in 2010 were already represented in museums' collections.

It is also worth noting that the total number of object cases from the Bronze Age to the Early Medieval period (188) reported is actually lower than the previous year (202), and that the rise in the total number of object cases is due to a large increase in Medieval and Post-Medieval finds having been reported (485 in 2010 to 398 in 2009). The number of coin cases reported in 2010 is almost identical for each period with the figures from 2009, except for cases from the Roman period, which increased from 38 in 2009 to 56 in 2010.

Table D: Method of discovery for 2010 Treasure finds (England & Wales)

	Number of finds	%
Metal detecting	797	92.67
Archaeological	29	3.37
To be confirmed	16	1.86
Chance	15	1.74
Reported by buyer	3	0.35
Total	860

Table D gives the method of discovery of finds reported as Treasure in 2010. As in previous years, metal-detecting accounts for the vast majority (92.67%) of Treasure cases reported in England and Wales. Archaeological finds accounted for 3.37% of 2010 Treasure finds. 16 finds (1.86%) are awaiting confirmation of the circumstances of their discovery. Chance finds, where the finder discovered Treasure on the surface of the ground or in the course of performing another activity like gardening, make up 1.74% of all finds. A very small number of Treasure cases – 3 (0.35%) – were reported not by the finder but by the person who acquired the item(s).

Enforcement

It is the aim of the Treasure Act to encourage people to report finds rather than pursue prosecutions. This is reflected in the fact that finders have 14 days to report Treasure from when they first know or have reason to believe the item they have found is potential Treasure. However, that is not to say finders who fail to report Treasure will not be prosecuted.

The Department of Portable Antiquities and Treasure works closely with relevant colleagues in local police forces, HM Revenue & Customs, and the Arts Council England (ACE) Export Licensing Unit, as well as the Metropolitan Police Service's Art & Antiques Unit and the Alliance to Reduce Heritage Crime.

The British Museum's Department of Portable Antiquities and Treasure continues to monitor eBay for items of potential Treasure, and questions vendors of such finds. In 2010, intelligence on 75 cases was logged and made available to the police.

Since September 2007, the Deputy Head of Portable Antiquities and Treasure has been an Expert Adviser for export licensing applications of metal-detected finds. In several cases exporters of unreported potential Treasure were asked to report these items in accordance with the Treasure Act.
