Minister's foreword

I am delighted to introduce the Treasure Act Annual Report 2013, which provides a report on the operation of the Treasure Act 1996 this year.

The Treasure Act 1996 is a continuing success, ensuring that museums are able to acquire the most important archaeological discoveries for the benefit of all. 2013 saw 990 potential Treasure finds reported in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, the same number as in 2012. Of these items, 363 have been (or are to be) acquired by museums.

Many museum acquisitions have been made possible only through the kind assistance of funding bodies, particularly the Art Fund, Headley Trust, Heritage Lottery Fund, National Heritage Memorial Fund and the V&A Purchase Grant Fund. I am grateful to these organisations for their recognition of the importance of archaeological finds and their support of museums' efforts to acquire them. This year also saw the conclusion of a funding stream from the Art Fund called 'Treasure Plus' which enabled museums that had already acquired Treasure to increase the public's engagement with it by facilitating new displays, exhibitions and learning activities. I also applaud the large number of interested parties waiving their right to a reward for Treasure cases, with individuals foregoing their share in 119 cases this year (26 more than in 2012). These donations have allowed 53 museums to acquire finds that may otherwise have not been available for the public to enjoy and experts to study.

There are many bodies and people who deserve praise for the ongoing success of the Treasure Act, in particular the Portable Antiquities Scheme (PAS) and its local network of 38 Finds Liaison Officers (FLOs) across England and Wales, to whom almost all finds of Treasure are reported, making the scheme fundamental to the operation of the Act. The FLOs' role is vital in disseminating information about the Act and archaeological best practice to finders of treasure and landowners. They are indispensable in facilitating the administration of Treasure cases and providing the logistical means for the Act to function. Together with curators, scientists and conservators at the national museums of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, they also provide expert reports on Treasure finds for Coroners, who, along with their staff, are also owed thanks for their diligence in holding Treasure inquests. The British Museum, which coordinates the PAS, also supports coroners in England and serves as the secretariat for the Treasure Valuation Committee and I am grateful for their continued excellent work. In order to ensure the long-term success of the Act, and that it reflects current practice and works as efficiently as possible, the Government is continuing a process to conduct a Review of the Treasure Act Code of Practice. This will also consider the definition of Treasure, and whether that should be amended.

Finally I would like to acknowledge the invaluable contribution of the Treasure Valuation Committee, chaired by Lord Renfrew of Kaimsthorn, which considered 408 treasure cases during 2013, 49 more than in 2012. I am thankful for the services of all of the Committee members, who voluntarily provide their time and expertise.

Introduction

Under the Treasure Act 1996, finders have a legal obligation to report all finds of potential Treasure. For a summary see finds.org.uk/treasure or the leaflet Advice for Finders of Archaeological Objects, Including Treasure.

The Act allows a national or local museum to acquire Treasure finds for public benefit. If this happens, a reward is paid, which is (normally) shared equally between the finder and landowner, though the interested parties may wish to waive their rights to a reward, enabling museums to acquire such finds at no or reduced cost. Rewards are fixed at the full market value of the find, determined by the Secretary of State on the advice of an independent panel of experts known as the Treasure Valuation Committee.

Although Treasure finds account for a relatively small proportion of archaeological finds found in England and Wales by the public, finders are encouraged to record all archaeological finds with the Portable Antiquities Scheme: this data is published on the online database at finds.org.uk. The Scheme and its network of local archaeologists – experts in recording small finds, known as Finds Liaison Officers – play an increasingly important role in the operation of the Treasure Act, advising finders of their legal obligations, providing advice on the process and writing reports on potential Treasure finds for local coroners.

Organisation

The administration of the Treasure Act is undertaken by the Department of Learning and National Partnerships at the British Museum, which employs a Treasure Registrar and four Assistant Treasure Registrars, one of whom is part-time. This work involves the preparation of Treasure cases for inquest (at a Coroner's Court), the handling of disclaimed cases, acting as the secretariat of the Treasure Valuation Committee, and the payment of rewards to finders/landowners.

Treasure Valuation Committee

The Committee's terms of reference are detailed in the Treasure Act 1996 Code of Practice. It is tasked to recommend to the Secretary of State the value of Treasure finds, to recommend abatements of rewards in the case of misbehaviour on the part of the interested parties, and to recommend an apportionment of the reward when there is a disagreement among the parties. The Committee is made up of independent experts appointed for their knowledge of the antiquities trade; its membership also includes someone to represent the interests of finders, a museums' representative, and an expert in cultural property law.

Membership of the Committee at the time of publication consisted of Lord Renfrew of Kaimsthorn (Chairman), Professor Ian Carradice, Dr Tim Pestell, Ms Marian Campbell, Ms Harry Bain, Ms Hetty Gleave, Mr Peter Clayton and Mr Jim Brown.

More information on the Treasure Valuation Committee, as well as electronic versions of the minutes of the meetings of the Committee, can be found online at finds.org.uk/treasure

Number of Treasure cases and geographic distribution

The number of Treasure cases reported in 2013 was 990 (Table A), exactly the same as in the previous year. This is a 393% increase on the first full year of the Act (1998).

The high level of the reporting of Treasure reflects a wider understanding on the part of finders of their obligations under the Treasure Act, through the education and outreach work of the Portable Antiquities Scheme and its Finds Liaison Officers.

Analysis of Treasure finds by Geographical area

Table B illustrates the geographic distribution of Treasure finds. The most productive county in 2013 was Norfolk (107 cases), again, which comprised more than 10% of the total number from across the country. Other areas of interest in England include the counties of Hampshire and Dorset, which combined for 88 Treasure finds in 2013, almost double the number of their combined total in the previous year (46).

The number of Treasure cases reported from Wales (25) brings the total number of cases from the country to 300 since the inception of the Treasure Act in 1997. Of these finds 25% come from the Vale of Glamorgan, the area surrounding Cardiff. Wales has a single full-time Portable Antiquities Scheme post (based in Cardiff), though finds-recording work is also undertaken by the Welsh Archaeological Trusts, and Finds Liaison Officers in the bordering areas of England. Northern Ireland, which is not covered by the Portable Antiquities Scheme, has with the incorporation of the four finds of Treasure reported in 2013, brought its total number of Treasure finds to 20. Searching for antiquities with a metal detector is not permitted in Northern Ireland.

Analysis of Treasure finds by period and type

Table C provides the dispositional outcome of Treasure cases according to period and type. Overall, of the 990 cases reported as potential Treasure, 36.7% (363) were acquired (or are in the process of being acquired) by museums. In 32.7% (119) of those cases, one or more parties waived their right to a reward under the Act, thereby enabling museums to acquire the finds at reduced or no public expense. For example, Lynn Museum was the grateful recipient of a large donation from Roger Hack, the finder, as well as the landowner, involving a Bronze Age hoard (case 2013 T708) provisionally valued at £740. A Post-Medieval gold finger-ring (case 2013 T567) valued at £500 saw the landowner waive his share of the reward to allow Buckinghamshire Museum Trust acquire at a reduced rate, while East Riding (Yorkshire) Museums benefitted from the landowner waiving his share of a reward in the case of a Roman coin hoard (2013 T543) valued at £450.

The DCMS maintains a policy of proactive encouragement of interested parties to consider waiving their right to a reward, which has borne dividends in recent years.

¹ This covers finds that have been acquired as well as finds where museums have made an expression of interest, but have not yet acquired.

² Includes objects 'of age' but not attributable to a particular historic period.

Slightly more than half (51%) of all Treasure cases are disclaimed by the Crown and returned to the finder or landowner, while another 9% are found to fall outside the definition of Treasure after they are reported. As with previous years, coin cases are acquired by museums at a higher rate than object cases, and in most instances, the older an object or coin case, the more likely it is to be acquired by museums. Object cases dating from the Post-Medieval make up more than a third of all Treasure cases, but only 24.7% of these were acquired.

Table D gives the method of discovery of finds reported as Treasure in 2012. As in previous years, metal-detecting accounts for the vast majority (94.75%) of Treasure cases reported in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Archaeological finds accounted for 1.72% of 2013 Treasure finds, about half as many as in the previous year. Chance finds, where the finder discovered Treasure on the surface of the ground or in the course of performing another activity like gardening, make up 1.62% of all finds.

Table E lists all of the museums or museum services across the country acquiring Treasure reported in the years 2012 and 2013, along with the number of cases they have acquired. 94 institutions acquired or are in the process of acquiring finds from this year. The large majority are acquired by local museums, 320 of 363 cases in 2013, or 88%. In most instances, the national museum will act as a backup and acquire important finds only if the local museum is unable to.

The following map shows the number of cases from 2013 acquired by each museum on the above list, sized proportionally so that those institutions acquiring fewer cases are represented by small circles, and those acquiring a higher number of cases are represented by larger circles. It illustrates the point that Treasure finds are housed in public collections across England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Museums acquiring Treasure cases reported in 2013

Enforcement

It is the aim of the Treasure Act to encourage people to report finds rather than pursue prosecutions. This is reflected in the fact that finders have 14 days to report Treasure from when they first know or have reason to believe the item they have found is potential Treasure. However, that is not to say finders who fail to report Treasure will not be prosecuted.

The British Museum works closely with relevant colleagues in local police forces, HM Revenue & Customs, the Arts Council England (ACE) Export Licensing Unit, and the Heritage and Cultural Property Crime Working Group as well as the Metropolitan Police Service's Art & Antiques Unit and the Alliance to Reduce Heritage Crime.

The British Museum's Department of Learning and National Partnerships continues to monitor eBay for items of potential Treasure, and questions vendors of such finds. In 2013, intelligence on 58 cases was logged and made available to the police.

Since September 2007, the Head of the Portable Antiquities Scheme has been an Expert Adviser for export licensing applications of metal-detected finds. In several cases exporters of unreported potential Treasure were asked to report these items in accordance with the Treasure Act.
