Minister's foreword

I am pleased to introduce the Treasure Act Annual Report 2015, which provides a report on the operation of the Treasure Act 1996 for that year.

The Treasure Act is an enduring success, ensuring that museums are able to acquire the most important archaeological discoveries for the benefit of all. 2015 saw 1,005 potential Treasure finds reported in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Of these discoveries, 341 have been (or are to be) acquired by public collections.

Many museum acquisitions have been made possible only through the kind assistance of funding bodies, particularly the Art Fund, Headley Trust, Heritage Lottery Fund, National Heritage Memorial Fund and the V&A Purchase Grant Fund. I am grateful to these organisations for their recognition of the importance of archaeological finds and their support of museums' efforts to acquire them. I also applaud the large number of interested parties waiving their right to a reward for Treasure cases, with individuals foregoing their share in 78 cases this year. These donations have allowed museums to acquire finds that they may not have otherwise been able to, thereby allowing the public to enjoy and experts to study them.

There are many bodies and people who deserve praise for the ongoing success of the Treasure Act, in particular the Portable Antiquities Scheme (PAS) and its local network of 40 Finds Liaison Officers (FLOs) across England and Wales, to whom almost all finds of Treasure are reported. The Scheme is fundamental to the operation of the Act, and on behalf of the Government I would like to thank the British Museum, its local partners, and Amgueddfa Cymru/National Museum Wales for their commitment to the success of the PAS. The role of the FLOs is vital in disseminating information about the Act and archaeological best practice to finders of Treasure and landowners. They are indispensable in facilitating the administration of Treasure cases and providing the logistical means for the Act to function. Together with curators, scientists and conservators at the national museums of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, they also provide expert reports on Treasure finds for Coroners, who, along with their staff, are owed thanks for their diligence in holding Treasure inquests. The British Museum, which manages the PAS in England, also supports coroners in that country and serves as the secretariat for the Treasure Valuation Committee and I am grateful for their continued excellent work. In order to ensure the long-term success of the Act, and that it reflects current practice and works as efficiently as possible, the Government is continuing a process to conduct a Review of the Treasure Act Code of Practice. This will also consider the definition of Treasure, and whether that should be amended.

Finally I would like to acknowledge the steadfast contribution of the Treasure Valuation Committee, chaired by Lord Renfrew of Kaimsthorn. I am grateful for the services of all of the Committee members, who voluntarily provide their time and expertise.

Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Arts, Heritage, and Tourism

Introduction

Under the Treasure Act 1996, finders have a legal obligation to report all finds of potential Treasure. For a summary see finds.org.uk/treasure or the leaflet Advice for Finders of Archaeological Objects, Including Treasure.

The Act allows a national or local museum to acquire Treasure finds for public benefit. If this happens, a reward is paid, which is (normally) shared equally between the finder and landowner, though the interested parties may wish to waive their rights to a reward, enabling museums to acquire such finds at no or reduced cost. Rewards are fixed at the full market value of the find, determined by the Secretary of State on the advice of an independent panel of experts known as the Treasure Valuation Committee.

Although Treasure finds account for a relatively small proportion of archaeological items found in England and Wales by the public, finders are encouraged to record all archaeological items with the Portable Antiquities Scheme: this data is published on its online database at finds.org.uk. The Scheme and its network of local archaeologists – experts in recording small finds, known as Finds Liaison Officers – play an important role in the operation of the Treasure Act, advising finders of their legal obligations, providing advice on the process and writing reports on potential Treasure finds for local coroners.

Organisation

The administration of the Treasure Act is undertaken by the British Museum, which employs a Treasure Registrar and four Assistant Treasure Registrars, one of whom is part-time. This work involves the preparation of Treasure cases for inquest (at a Coroner's Court), the handling of disclaimed cases, acting as the secretariat of the Treasure Valuation Committee, and the payment of rewards to finders/landowners.

Treasure Valuation Committee

The Committee's terms of reference are detailed in the Treasure Act 1996 Code of Practice. In short, it is tasked to recommend to the Secretary of State the value of Treasure finds, to recommend abatements of rewards in the case of misbehaviour on the part of the interested parties, and to recommend an apportionment of the reward when there is a disagreement among the parties. The Committee is made up of independent experts appointed for their knowledge of the antiquities trade; its membership also includes someone to represent the interests of finders, a museums' representative, and an expert in cultural property law.

Membership of the Committee at the time of publication consisted of Lord Renfrew of Kaimsthorn (Chairman), Professor Roger Bland, Dr Tim Pestell, Ms Marian Campbell, Ms Harry Bain, Ms Hetty Gleave, Mr Christopher Martin and Mr Jim Brown.

More information on the Treasure Valuation Committee, as well as electronic versions of the minutes of the meetings of the Committee, can be found online at finds.org.uk/treasure

Number of Treasure cases and geographic distribution

The number of Treasure cases reported in 2015 was 1,005 (Table A). This is more than five times the number of cases reported in the first full year of the Act (1998).

Table A: Number of Treasure cases reported 1988–2016
(England, Wales and Northern Ireland).

Year	No. of Treasure cases

The high level of the reporting of Treasure reflects a wider understanding on the part of finders of their obligations under the Treasure Act, through the education and outreach work of the Portable Antiquities Scheme and its Finds Liaison Officers.

Analysis of Treasure finds by Geographical area

Table B illustrates the geographic distribution of Treasure finds. The busiest county in 2015 was Norfolk (126 cases). To put this in perspective, that is only one fewer case than has come from all of South and West Yorkshire in the last 18 years! East Anglia in general sees the highest number of reported cases – Suffolk (87) and Essex (49) are the second and third most productive counties.

The number of Treasure cases reported from Wales (37) is the largest amount in a single year since the inception of the Treasure Act in 1997. The majority of these finds come from the south of the country; Monmouthshire (8) had as many or more finds reported than many English counties. Wales had a single full-time PAS post (based in Cardiff) in 2015, though finds recording work is also undertaken by the Welsh Archaeological Trusts, and Finds Liaison Officers in the bordering areas of England. A second FLO post was created in 2017 and is based in Wrexham. Northern Ireland, which is not covered by the PAS, has the lowest number of reported finds (2) of the three countries where the Treasure Act applies. This is explained by the fact that unlicensed searching for antiquities with a metal detector is not permitted in Northern Ireland.

Analysis of Treasure finds by period and type

Table C provides the dispositional outcome of Treasure cases according to period and type.

In last year's report, attention was drawn to the consistency, of the rate at which Treasure cases have been acquired by museums over the last decade. This acquisition rate, which also includes cases where the interested parties have waived a reward, has been between 33% and 37% of all cases, each year. 2015 conforms to this pattern and 34% of the 1,005 cases from this year have been, or are in the process of being, acquired by public collections. This demonstrates the continued importance and relevance of the Treasure Act in ensuring that museums are able to acquire heritage items for the benefit of all.

A steady rate of acquisition indicates that museums with restricted budgets are making effective use of the opportunities for fundraising available to them, from the national funding bodies listed above to local funders and by holding events to raise money. It also means that the generosity of those interested parties who waive their rewards is essential in ensuring that a high number of finds end up in public collections.

The DCMS maintains a policy of proactive encouragement of interested parties to consider waiving their right to a reward, which has borne dividends in recent years.

So far, of the cases acquired in 2015, 23% (78) have seen one or more interested parties waive their right to a reward, an increase of 2.5% over the previous year. Many of these were for substantial amounts of money. For example, John Eddolls (the landowner) and the finder (who wishes to remain anonymous) of a Post-Medieval gold finger-ring (case 2015 T168) from Grafton area, Oxfordshire, waived their £700 reward to allow Oxfordshire Museum Service to acquire it at no charge. Hampshire Cultural Trust acquired a pair of Bronze Age gold basket earrings (case 2015 T72) when the finder (anonymous) and the landowner James Dawson did not claim their £300 reward.

¹ This covers finds that have been acquired as well as finds where museums have made an expression of interest, but have not yet acquired.

² Includes objects 'of age' but not attributable to a particular historic period.

Treasure finds are Crown property. Slightly more than half (54%) of all Treasure cases were disclaimed by the Crown and returned to the finder or landowner, while another 9% were found to fall outside the definition of Treasure after they are reported. As with previous years, coin cases tend to be acquired by museums at a higher rate than object cases (though not in the Roman period), and as a general observation, the older an object or coin, the more likely it is to be acquired by museums. Object cases dating from the Post-Medieval make up about a third of all Treasure cases, but less than a quarter of these were acquired. This is an almost identical profile to the statistics from 2014, and for the year before that! Almost half of these acquisitions are made possible through donation, and this is probably because many of the objects have less market value and there is less incentive for interested parties to claim a reward.

Table D: Method of discovery for 2015 Treasure finds from England, Wales & Northern Ireland

	Number of finds	%
Metal detecting	967	96.22

Table D gives the method of discovery of finds reported as Treasure in 2015. Metal-detecting accounts for about the same percentage of Treasure cases reported in England, Wales and Northern Ireland this year (96.22%) as last (96.14%) Archaeological finds accounted for 2.19% of 2015 Treasure finds, a slight increase on the previous year. Chance finds, where the finder discovered Treasure on the surface of the ground or in the course of performing another activity like gardening, make up less 1% of all finds.

Table E lists all of the museums or museum services across the country acquiring Treasure reported in the years 2012, 2013, 2014, and 2015 along with the number of cases they have acquired. 97 institutions acquired or are in the process of acquiring finds from this year. The large majority are acquired by local museums, 314 of 341 cases in 2015, or 91%. In most instances, the national museum will act as the back-up and acquire important finds only if the local museum is unable to.

Enforcement

It is the aim of the Treasure Act to encourage people to report finds rather than pursue prosecutions. This is reflected in the fact that finders have 14 days to report Treasure from when they first know or have reason to believe the item they have found is potential Treasure: unique in English law. However, that is not to say finders who fail to report Treasure will not be prosecuted.

In June 2016, the finder of a Bronze Age gold penannular ring from Surrey who failed to report the discovery was convicted of Theft and ordered to pay a fine of £1,050. In early 2017 the finder of a hoard of Early Medieval gold coins from Norfolk who failed to report his discovery was convicted of Theft and jailed for 16 months, lost his job and pension and was forbidden from owning a metal detector for five years.

The British Museum works closely with relevant colleagues in local police forces, HM Revenue & Customs, and the Arts Council England (ACE) Export Licensing Unit, as well as the Metropolitan Police Service's Art & Antiques Unit and the Alliance to Reduce Heritage Crime. The Portable Antiquities Scheme also has a representative on the National Police Chief Council's Heritage and Cultural Property Crime Working Group.

The British Museum has a memorandum of understanding with eBay allowing it to question vendors of items of potential unreported Treasure. In 2015, eight cases were logged and made available to the police.

Since September 2007, the Head of the Portable Antiquities Scheme has been an Expert Adviser for export licensing applications of metal-detected finds. In several cases exporters of unreported potential Treasure were asked to report these items in accordance with the Treasure Act.
