Minister's Foreword

This year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Treasure Act 1996 – a landmark Act of Parliament which, for the past quarter of a century, has helped to preserve significant finds and ensure that they can be enjoyed and admired by the public.

It is therefore a great pleasure to introduce this year's Annual Report on the Treasure Act, which gives an overview of how the Act operated in England, Wales, and Northern Ireland in 2019.

The figures show a sustained growth in the number of treasure cases, with a total of 1,303 reported. This is an increase of 67% over the last decade – and a more than fivefold increase since the introduction of the Act.

During the course of 2019, 292 objects were added to museum collections across England, Wales, and Northern Ireland so that they could be seen and admired by people in each of these parts of the UK. A particularly notable find was the Chew Valley Hoard, an astonishing discovery of over two and half thousand coins which provides a fascinating insight into the life and politics of Wales and the west of England just after the Norman Conquest. The hoard is due to be acquired by the Roman Baths museum in Bath, which will add to the understanding of, and interest in, the history of the local area for the many people who visit that excellent museum each year.

Although this report covers the year before the COVID-19 pandemic began, I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who has worked so hard during that challenging period to keep the treasure process functioning. This includes the local Finds Liaison Officers, Amgueddfa Cymru / National Museum Wales, and the Department of Agriculture, Environment & Rural Affairs and the Ulster Museum in Northern Ireland, who have all continued to work as the gateway to the treasure process. I thank the Treasure Registry at the British Museum, which organised online valuations and meetings for the Treasure Valuation Committee during the age of social distancing – and the members of the Committee themselves, under their Chairman Roger Bland, who have continued to provide their informed and well-considered recommendations in difficult circumstances.

I would also like to acknowledge the local authority partners who support the treasure process through the Portable Antiquities Scheme, without which it would have been even more difficult to continue this important work. Finders, landowners, and museums alike have shown great patience and understanding in the face of the unavoidable delays since March 2020, and I would like to thank them for that.

I hope everyone interested in treasure will continue to help us build on the successes of the past to make the Treasure Act 1996 even more effective as it embarks on its next quarter-century.

Lord Parkinson of Whitley Bay
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Minister for Arts)

Introduction

Under the Treasure Act 1996, finders have a legal obligation to report all finds of potential Treasure. For a summary see <https://finds.org.uk/treasure> or the leaflet Advice for Finders of Archaeological Objects, Including Treasure.

The Act allows a museum to acquire Treasure finds for public benefit. If this happens, a reward is paid, which is (normally) shared equally between the finder and landowner, though the interested parties may wish to waive their rewards, enabling museums to acquire such finds at no or reduced cost. Rewards are fixed at the market value of the find, determined by the Secretary of State on the advice of an independent panel of experts known as the Treasure Valuation Committee.

1,303 finds were reported Treasure in 2019, bringing the total number of Treasure finds reported to more than 16,000 since the commencement of the Act. In 2019 these cases consisted of over 22,620 individual artefacts, which make up more than a quarter of the archaeological items found in England and Wales recorded with the Portable Antiquities Scheme; (81,602 in 2019). This data is published on its online database at finds.org.uk. The Scheme and its network of local archaeologists – experts in recording small finds, known as Finds Liaison Officers – play an important role in the operation of the Treasure Act, advising finders of their legal obligations, providing advice on the process and writing reports on potential Treasure finds for coroners.

Organisation

The administration of the Treasure Act is undertaken by the British Museum, which employs a Senior Treasure Registrar and four Treasure Registrars, one of whom is part-time. This work involves the preparation of Treasure cases for inquest (at a Coroner's Court), the handling of disclaimed cases, acting as the secretariat of the Treasure Valuation Committee, and the payment of rewards to finders/landowners. In Wales, Amgueddfa Cymru – National Museum Wales undertakes the registration of finds, the liaison with finders and landowners and the writing of reports for coroners; in Northern Ireland this is done by the National Museum of Northern Ireland.

Treasure Valuation Committee

The Committee's terms of reference are detailed in the Treasure Act 1996 Code of Practice. In short, it is tasked to recommend to the Secretary of State the value of Treasure finds, to recommend abatements of rewards in the case of misbehaviour on the part of the interested parties, and to recommend an apportionment of the reward when there is a disagreement among the parties. The Committee is made up of independent experts appointed for their knowledge of the antiquities trade; its membership also includes someone to represent the interests of finders, a museums' representative, and an expert in cultural property law.

Membership of the Committee consists of Professor Roger Bland (Chair), Ms Gail Boyle, Ms Marian Campbell, Ms Harry Bain, Dr Megan Gooch, Mr Christopher Martin and Ms Lucinda Orr.

More information on the Committee, as well as electronic versions of the minutes of the meetings of the Committee, can be found online at finds.org.uk/treasure

Impact of COVID-19

Whilst the target time for the completion of Treasure cases is one year from the time of reporting, the large number of items reported and the complexity and size of many of these cases means that they often take longer to process. Most cases were still in process when the COVID-19 pandemic caused the first national lockdown in March 2020 and subsequent measures were put in place to limit the spread of the virus. The British Museum was shut to all but essential workers and most British Museum staff were furloughed for the summer and autumn months of 2020, and many local and regional museums were operating with much reduced staff. The Treasure Valuation Committee was unable to meet in person between March 2020 and July 2021 – it did manage a number of valuations on the basis of photographs, but many cases had valuations delayed until the objects could be brought to London and the Committee could see them. This meant, for the purposes of this report, that a number of Treasure cases reported in 2019 which would otherwise have been resolved by 2021 were further delayed. This can be seen in the analysis of Treasure finds, later in this report, where a large number have the disposition of ‘TBD’ – to be determined.

At the time of publication, measures to combat COVID-19 adopted by various institutions, such as staff being encouraged to work from home, and to avoid unnecessary travel, continues to impact the processing time of some cases. On the other hand, a greater acceptance of the ability to work from photographs for certain elements of the Treasure process has streamlined some aspects.

Number of Treasure cases and geographic distribution

The number of Treasure cases reported in 2019 was 1,303 (Table A). This is an increase on the previous year, and continues a trend of a slow increase in the total number of finds reported.

The high level of the reporting of Treasure reflects an increased understanding on the part of finders of their obligations under the Treasure Act, through the education and outreach work of the Portable Antiquities Scheme and its Finds Liaison Officers, as well as (seemingly) an increased amount of people searching for archaeology.

Analysis of Treasure finds by Geographical area

Table B illustrates the geographic distribution of Treasure finds. Both England (1254) and Wales (45) saw the highest number of Treasure cases reported in the history of the Act. For Wales, this took the total number of cases from the country reported since the commencement of the Act to 503. Over 37% of those finds (185) come from two relatively small counties in the south east of the country, the Vale of Glamorgan and Monmouthshire.

The large majority of finds reported under the Treasure Act come from England, particular in the south and east. Most counties have relatively consistent numbers of finds reported each year, rising slightly with the overall trend. Hampshire however saw a 52% increase in Treasure cases between 2018 (68) and 2019 (104) and had the largest number of cases from any one county. Neighbouring Wiltshire had an increase of 42%, from 43 to 61 cases, with West Sussex (60% - 15 to 24) and Dorset (12% - 41 to 46) also showing larger numbers of finds than the previous year. This served to emphasise the concentration of Treasure finds from the region centred around Hampshire, rivalled only by the artefact rich counties of East Anglia (Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex) and the eastern coast from Lincolnshire, North and East Yorkshire, where flat arable landscapes provide ideal conditions for metal-detecting.

Finds from Northern Ireland make up a tiny proportion of all Treasure finds (4 this year), which is partially explained by the fact that unlicensed searching for antiquities with a metal detector is not permitted there.

<sup>1</sup> This covers finds that have been acquired as well as finds where museums have made an expression of interest, but have not yet acquired.

Analysis of Treasure finds by period, type and disposition

Table C provides the dispositional outcome of Treasure cases according to period and type.

The first thing to note is that the circumstances around the COVID-19 pandemic meant that a significantly large number of cases (273) had unknown dispositions at the time of report writing. In 2018 that number was 123, itself a higher figure than the previous year. Any conclusions made about the data need to take this into account.

Treasure finds are Crown property. The point of the Treasure Act is to enable these finds to be acquired by public collections (museums), for the benefit of all, but there is a recognition that much material which meets the definition of Treasure is not 'museum worthy' or museums do not have the means to acquire it. For those finds that are acquired, the Secretary of State (in practice, the British Museum, acting on behalf of the Secretary of State) will normally pay a reward to the finder and landowner equal to the market value of the find, as recommended by the Treasure Valuation Committee. The responsibility for providing the money to pay the reward lies with the museum which acquires the find. Therefore, museums must decide, with each find, whether it is in the public interest for it to be acquired. In cases where a museum declines to pursue acquisition of a find of Treasure, the Crown 'disclaims' its interest.

In 2019 more than half (58%) of all Treasure cases were disclaimed by the Crown and returned to the finder or landowner, while another 7.6% were found to fall outside the definition of Treasure after they are reported. As with previous years, coin cases tend to be acquired by museums at a higher rate than object cases (46% compared to 31%), and as a general observation, the older an object or coin, the more likely it is to be acquired by museums.

The percentage of cases being acquired by museums (including both donations and cases where the museum had to pay – but discounting all of the cases whose disposition is yet to be determined) was 34.1%. This is welcome news, considering the pandemic has had a negative effect on most museums' finances, particularly on acquisition budgets.

There is a public cost to the administration of the Treasure Act, especially in organising the valuation and reward payments. The Code of Practice requires that all finds valued by the Treasure Valuation Committee be seen and reported on by a member of the antiquities trade, whose fees must be included. Accordingly, museums have been reminded that they should only express interest in acquiring finds if they have a serious and realistic chance to complete the acquisition.

A steady rate of acquisition indicates that museums with restricted budgets are making effective use of the opportunities for fundraising available to them; from the national funding bodies listed above to local funders and by holding events to raise money.

Donations

The generosity of those interested parties who waive their rewards is essential in ensuring that a high number of finds end up in public collections. The DCMS, national museums and the Portable Antiquities Scheme maintain a policy of proactive encouragement of interested parties to consider waiving their right to a reward. Such actions are termed 'donations'.

At the time of report writing, of the cases reported in 2018 which are being acquired, 17% (59) have seen one or more interested parties waive their right to a reward. This will no doubt increase as more cases are declared Treasure at inquest and valued – most donations come after at least a provisional valuation of the case has been carried out, as it is from that point that interested parties appreciate the market value of the find.

The following donors are happy to be named in this report:

Joe Adams	Stewart Gilmartin
Roy Alge	Lady C Hamilton
Mark Bastone	Paul Hamilton
J Bean	Robert Hudson
Antony Bishenden	H Maiden & Son
Lawrence Bone	David Moles
Jennifer Cobb	Alex Ogilvie
John Earley	Lord and Lady Phillimore

Some of these were for notable artefacts, and the amount of money foregone represented substantial savings for the acquiring museums. The person who owned the land where a Bronze Age gold bracelet was found in Wrawby, North Lincolnshire (2019 T188) waved his share of a reward, equal to £1,200, to enable North Lincolnshire Museum to acquire the bracelet more affordably. Roy Alge, the finder of a Post-Medieval gold finger-ring from Feniton, Devon (2019 T211) and the landowner, both declined to claim a reward for ring, which was valued at £500, allowing it to go to Allhallows Museum for free. Robert Hudson, the landowner where a Post-Medieval silver verrel from Thorpe, Surrey (2019 T32) was found, donated his share of the reward (£375) which saved considerable money for Chertsey Museum to be able to acquire it.

Many finders and landowners waived their right to a reward prior to an inquest being held, before the cases were valued – for example in the case of a Roman gold jewellery component from near Sandwich, Kent (2019 T571 – see Image 3, below). This not only helped the acquiring museums, but also saved public money by not requiring the system to pay for provisional valuations from a member of the trade.

Table D gives the method of discovery of finds reported as Treasure in 2019. As in previous years, metal-detecting accounts for the vast majority of Treasure cases reported in England, Wales and Northern Ireland (95.63%). A much smaller portion of finds originate from archaeological digs (2.76% – though this number increased by 10 over the previous year) and other means. Most of the Treasure finds from professional excavations will remain with the rest of the material in the site archive, though landowners are eligible to claim rewards under the Treasure Act.

Responsible Searching

The Code of Practice for Responsible Detecting, endorsed by the Portable Antiquities Scheme and numerous heritage and landowner bodies, advises among other things that finders who discover anything below the ploughsoil or a concentration of finds or unusual material should stop digging, contact their local Finds Liaison Officer or archaeologist, and wait for support before continuing. This allows for the opportunity for the context of the find to be properly recorded, and for the artefacts to be recovered safely. Recently, Finds Liaison Officers have been asked to report whether Treasure finds reported to them comprised undisturbed hoards or assemblages and if so, whether the finder had sought assistance before proceeding to remove the items.

In 2019, of the 1,246 finds made by metal detectorists, 12 consisted of previously undisturbed assemblages, and assistance was sought in seven of those cases.

An important goal of the Treasure Act is to ensure that the public benefits from these finds by allowing them to be acquired by relevant museums. The Treasure Act provides a reliable and secure mechanism for museum acquisition, as the objects all have clear, established provenances and the museums do not have to negotiate with private dealers or pay auction fees. Table E lists all of the museums, museum services or archaeological archives across the country acquiring Treasure reported in the years 2012 – 2019, along with the number of cases they have acquired. Over the course of this eight-year period, 237 different bodies have acquired Treasure. For cases reported in 2019, 117 institutions acquired or are in the process of acquiring finds. The large majority are acquired by local (i.e. non-national) museums, 328 of 351 cases in 2019, or 93%. The largest number of cases were acquired by Dorset County Museum (19) followed closely by Norwich Castle Museum (15), The Collection – Lincoln (14), Museum of Somerset (14) and Oxfordshire Museums Service (14). In most instances, the national museum will act as the back-up and acquire important finds if the local museum is unable to. In Wales, Amgueddfa Cymru/National Museum Wales has traditionally acquired the majority of finds reported, but thanks to support from its HLF funded Saving Treasures; Telling Stories project, many more museums around the country were enabled to acquire Treasure from their local area.

The maps (courtesy of Andrew Brown) on the following page shows all of the museums that have acquired Treasure reported between 2012-2019, and just those acquired in 2019. The larger the dot, the more cases that museum has acquired. As is perhaps expected, museums in East Anglia like Norwich Castle Museum and Colchester & Ipswich Museums Service acquire many cases but other museums in areas outside of the South East and East Anglia also show themselves to be major acquirers of Treasure. These include the Potteries Museum & Art Gallery in Stoke-on-Trent, North Lincolnshire Museum, Oxfordshire Museums and the York Museums Trust. The maps show the wide geographic spread of museums acquiring Treasure finds.

Enforcement

It is the aim of the Treasure Act to encourage people to report finds rather than pursue prosecutions. This is reflected in the fact that finders have 14 days to report Treasure from when they first know or have reason to believe the item they have found is potential Treasure: unique in English law. However, that is not to say finders who fail to report Treasure will not be prosecuted.

The British Museum works closely with relevant colleagues in local police forces, HM Revenue & Customs, and the Arts Council England (ACE) Export Licensing Unit, as well as the Metropolitan Police Service's Art & Antiques Unit and the Alliance to Reduce Heritage Crime. The Portable Antiquities Scheme also has a representative on the National Police Chief Council's Heritage and Cultural Property Crime Working Group.

The British Museum has a memorandum of understanding with eBay allowing it to question vendors of items of potential unreported Treasure. In 2019, seven cases were logged and made available to the police.

Since September 2007, the Head of the Portable Antiquities Scheme has been an Expert Adviser for export licensing applications of metal-detected finds. In several cases exporters of unreported potential Treasure were asked to report these items in accordance with the Treasure Act.

The Treasure Valuation Committee, in addition to recommending to the Secretary of State the value of finds of Treasure, also recommends abatements of rewards to interested parties when they are deemed to have behaved poorly in the course of making and reporting the Treasure find. The circumstances for which a reward may be abated are listed in paragraph 79 of the Treasure Act Code of Practice. Since 2007, there have been 23 cases where the Committee has abated a reward; the most common offenses are failure to seek permission prior to searching, failure to report finds in a timely manner or as directed by the Coroner, and deliberately or recklessly damaging artefacts.

Valuation

The Treasure Valuation Committee recommends a value to the Secretary of State for finds of Treasure that come before it. This is in order for the landowner and finder to be paid a reward equal to the market value of the find. The process for valuation requires firstly that each find is 'provisionally' valued by an expert in the antiquities trade. The report from this expert – the 'provisional valuation' – is shared with the finder, landowner and acquiring museum (the 'interested parties') and they are invited to supply any comments they wish to the Treasure Valuation Committee, or to commission a valuation of their own. The Committee then considers the case at the next available meeting, taking account of the report on the material prepared for the Coroner, the provisional valuation, and any evidence or information provided by the interested parties. The Committee then makes a recommendation on the value (and on the distribution of the reward, if necessary) and interested parties are informed of this and given the opportunity to agree the valuation or to supply new evidence or information to challenge it, if they disagree with the Committee's view.

Table F: Valuation of Treasure cases reported in 2019

Total number of cases with agreed valuations:	114
Total value of all cases with agreed valuations:	£91,388
Average valuation for each case that has been valued:	£801.65
Median valuation for all cases that have been valued:	£300

The data in Table F reflects the information available as of September 2021. There are a number of cases that are still undergoing the valuation process where the final valuation is still pending, including several high-profile cases such as the Chew Valley Hoard of Anglo-Norman coins (2019 T1088) and a Bronze Age gold armlet from St Bees, Cumbria (2019 T645). Some cases that are acquired by museums are not valued at all, because the interested parties waive their right to a reward before the case reaches that stage.

The highest valued individual case in 2019 was 2019 T143, an Iron Age gold coin hoard (17 coins) from near Blythburgh, Suffolk, valued at £11,500 and acquired by Halesworth Museum. On the other end of the scale, seven cases were valued at £10 each, but the lowest valuation was £5, for an Early Medieval silver fragment from near King's Lynn, Norfolk (2019 T65).

The Treasure Valuation Committee had seven meetings in the calendar year 2019, where it saw 426 cases, almost identical to the number seen the year before. Of these cases, 27 were being reconsidered (that is, seen again) because one of the interested parties had challenged a previous recommendation by the Committee. In all of the cases that were reconsidered, the challenge had come from the finder or landowner, and in one, the acquiring museum too submitted a challenge. This shows that the large majority of cases valued by the Committee are not challenged by interested parties.
